

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A gaming machine is provided, to which a plurality of counters including display sections for displaying numerical values changing according to a state of a game can be attached in a simple structure. In the gaming machine, a plurality of counters including display sections for displaying numerical values changing according to a state of a game are accommodated in a container. The counters accommodated in the container are secured by being pressed with a surface-pressure plate from behind. In this configuration, the plurality of counters are secured with a single surface-pressure plate instead of being individually fastened with screws and the like.
